Study Has Been Made In Respect To Weed Control And Their Method Of Germination

WEEDS are a constant menace to crop production. They increase the cost of cultivation as efforts are made to control or prevent their growth. To seed and propagation and their seeds are a constant source of danger to the desired crop when they have to be removed during the growing season. They have the faculty of being able to grow in many places, even in the most sterile soil, and given an even chance, they soon dominate the situation and crowd out the desired crop.

Wheat, corn and many other crops are constantly being attacked by weeds. In many cases the weeds are so numerous that they are almost impossible to remove by hand. British Case From England

WASHINGTON. — One hundred years ago the United States Congress established the Smithsonian Institution after debating for eight years whether to accept the bequest of "a line-bounded foreigner" born out of wedlock.

James Smithson, one of the Duke of Northumberland and of Elizabeth County, Mass., died in 1829 and left his half-million dollar estate to the United States. His will provided that the money be "for the use of the United States, to be known as the 'Smithsonian Institution'."

Public Archives At Ottawa A Mine Of Information Regarding Canada's History

If you doubt about any matter regarding Canada's history, there is one place where you can be assured of getting a satisfactory answer—the Public Archives. "We answer a great variety of questions," said Dr. L. B. Dickson, Director of the Public Archives, "and we are always ready to help you."

"They range from the influence of the Indians on the early history of the country to the most recent events of the war."

"We have a large collection of maps, charts, and other documents, and we are always ready to help you."
